The postponement of the trial of J. R. F. Rinehart, Cashier of the defunct Farmers and Drivers Bank of Waynesburg, was largely due to the active efforts of a notoriously yellow Pittsburg newspaper which for the past couple of weeks has sought to convict Rinehart in its own columns of all manner of crime in connection with the failed bank on evidence wholly unsupported and authorities always anonymous.

While some of the matter published may be found on facts, it is evident from a mere perusal of it that it is more or less embellished. It has been well calculated to inflame the public mind in Greene county and to bring forth the threats of personal violence which are alleged to have been made. Under the circumstances, it was perhaps proper to postpone the trial.

On the other hand, if the prejudice against Rinehart is as great in Greene county as his attorneys indicate, justice demanded, not a postponement, but a change of venue, and further demands on the part of the defense will lend color to the charge that the object is not justice but escape from justice.

Among the Exchanges

Some hundreds of millions of British capital have been invested in Indian railways, but the Hindus themselves have not been buyers of railway stocks and bonds. The money for the development of the natural resources has come from abroad, with the result that the annual interest payments have to be made abroad. It would be much better for these interest payments to be made at home, and it is now proposed to draw for future loans upon the vast stores of gold and silver known to be hoarded by the natives. An official commission, charged with the task of considering the whole question of Indian railway finance, has recently reported that the annual capital expenditure of the government in the construction of railways should be increased from $50,000,000 to $62,500,000. "No definite limit," says the report, "can be assigned to the amount that can be remuneratively devoted to the development and expansion of the Indian railway system." An Indian official accordingly urges an effort be made to enlist native capital in the government's remunerative enterprises.—Baltimore Sun.

It is now made known that there was not even the poor excuse of the rescue of a grossly guilty individual from summary justice to furnish a semblance of warrant for the Springfield riot. What started the row was an allegation that a white woman had been attacked by a negro. A suspect was arrested and was spirited out of town. Whereupon the mob, denied its expected victim, took full possession of the city. The place of business of a citizen who had assisted the officers to save their prisoner was asked and a wholesale assault was made on the negro population. Two negroes were lynched. Of course, if the subject had been taken from the officers he would have been lynched. It now appears that this man was innocent. The victim of the assault has so testified. Verily, Springfield's ignominy is made complete to the last detail.—Providence Journal.

The German emperor's devotion to peace must always be understood as conditioned upon his having his way. He will not quarrel with anybody who respects German supremacy. To anybody on the other hand, who undertakes to act without consulting him he is always ready with a warning. He came very near to precipitating a European war by his former interference in Morocco, and it is not strange that his present abrupt attitude should cause general apprehension. In this case, however, he will have the weight of all the other signatories of the Algeciras act against him, and it is not likely that he will find a cause belli in the terms of recognition of Mulai Hafid. He only wishes it understood that he is not to be disregarded in any new arrangements.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The daily reports of outrages and threats from the Black Hand evil show how common this highly mischievous crime is becoming with us and call for the most energetic steps on the part of the proper authorities to check it. The crime is more often chronicled, it would seem, than burglary, and if it is not soon stopped it requires no far stretch of the imagination to see people generally laid under tribute to this form of brigadage. It is a highly obnoxious robbery. Any person suspected of having means is liable nowadays to receive a letter demanding money on pain that, if refused, death or some other fearful punishment will be inflicted. It is easy to see how a community can be terrorized. Regarding this evil the Washington Star says:

"The Italian highwaymen have transferred their activities from the less orderly sections of their own land to the most densely populated portions of America. The Black Hand crimes must be checked before they extend beyond the limits of the Italian colonies in our cities. It is a disgraceful reflection upon the American municipal government that organized crime has thrived so long almost without hindrance."—Boston Advertiser.

Figures submit a Wednesday's hearing of the public service commission by the auditor of the Metropolitan receivers showed that the cost per car mile of operating the trolley and horse car lines had been 23.41 and 31.13 cents respectively since the receivership, as against 19.01 and 29.96 in the fiscal year prior to the receivership. This comparison is in line with the usual results under a court administration of a property, but it would not be fair in the present case to lay all the responsibility at the receivers' door. Cost of operation presumably includes the charge for maintenance and repairs, and, as everyone knows, the condition of the company's plant and equipment was so bad when the receivers took charge that unusually large expenditure of such purposes was peremptory. Even granting this, however, the fact remains that the cost of running the company is increased without any comprehensive plan for meeting it, and that the results, so far as regards the efficiency of service, are notoriously unsatisfactory. The problem is one which can be properly taken up only through reorganization of the old capital and raising a new capital, and this is an undertaking beyond the scope of the receivers, powers. There can be no genuine rehabilitation of the system, and no return to proper transit facilities on the surface lines, until the owners and creditors of the property take the matters into their own hands.—New York Post.

Bryan's Pet Theory.

During his extended career as a statesman of presidential aspirations Mr. Bryan has shown a remarkable facility for taking up with theories in statecraft, the crudeness and impracticability of which have been easily demonstrable. And concerning his free coinage of silver and his government ownership of railroads hobbies the demonstrations seem to have been plain enough to convince even himself of their erroneous assumptions, as there is not a word in the latest Bryan platform advocating either of these aforetime Bryan doctrines. But in the Oklahoma scheme to have the state create and maintain a special fund for the guarantee of depositors in banks Mr. Bryan felt so sure that he had at last come across something of high political value and a scheme, moreover, that would stand the severest scrutiny that he adopted it and had it incorporated in the Denver platform. In less than two months following the formal adoption by the democratic presidential candidate of this new scheme of finance it has been reduced to an absurdity by more than one method of analysis. Oklahoma, where the plan is now operative and applicable to all state banks, the following facts indicative of its defectiveness have become apparent: The Oklahoma law provides that the fund created for the protection of bank depositors shall be invested in state securities known as state warrants which bear three per cent. interest annually. Now it has developed with a clearness which is apparent to the most casual observer that the state, in time of panic, when it would be absolutely necessary to have the guarantee fund ready and available, will find itself loaded up with a form of security which would find so sale whatever on the market during panicky times except at a ruinous discount. Banks fail generally because they are unable to realize upon their assets, and Oklahoma, loaded up with its own promises to pay, would not in a panic season be able to turn those promises into cash. As an national system, instead of a states system the bank guarantee scheme is equally defective, though for other reasons. The palpable fact that it would tax the conservatively managed savings banks and conservative institutions generally to make good the losses sustained by depositors in banks associated with speculative interests is alone sufficient to condemn the latest of Mr. Bryan's political hobbies.—Baltimore American.

The War of Words That Comes When They Block Each Other.

There is no more entertaining way to spend an idle hour in Paris than to get into a taxicab and instruct the driver to go along some street where you will be reasonably sure to get into a jam or to bump against another cab. The charm of the experience is, of course, enhanced by your ignorance of what the cabbies say. Should your driver merely graze the wheels of another cab he will turn on his seat and yell mellancholously at the other driver, who in turn will shout back an assortment of vowels. But the best is a quarrel between two cabbies obstructing each other's way. The conversation, translated as nearly literally as is safe, goes in this wise: "Sacred name! Why do you?" "Holly blue! I do not!" "Stomach on the ground! You have the face of an ox!" "Blue stomach! Are you in chains?" "A bas! Name of a dog!" "Mon Dieu! Name of a pig!" "Wow (or words to that effect)! Name of a name!" "A thousand deaths! Name of a name of a name!" Now you begin to expect some doings. While you have not fully understood, you are satisfied that nothing but pistols and knives will wipe out the insults. Unfortunately about this time the jam is untangled and you are allowed to drive away, but the other driver yells after you: "Aha! You are a little piece of brown soap!" It seems that this expression is the "fighting name" in Paris. Were it not that your cabby owes a duty to you and must convey you to your destination you know by his facial expression that he would climb down and get that other cabby and muss up the city with him. He contents himself with turning about and making a face in the direction of his enemy and of going through the motion of spitting at him. Then he says "Toop!" to the horse, and the war is over.—Chicago Post.

AIDED HER RIVAL.

Romance of a London Society Leader and a Diamond Necklace.
The jewelers of Bond street could if they liked tell many an amazing story. There is no need to dilate on the fascination which scintillating gems exercise upon the feminine mind. That fascination is a fact and may serve to explain a mortal enmity which existed recently and probably still exists between two well known society leaders. To one of them a highly placed admirer mentioned his intention to purchase a diamond necklace. Knowing that the lady possessed more than a superficial knowledge of the value of stones, he begged her to select for him what he required. The price he was prepared to give was £1,500. The lady jumped to the conclusion that such a request could have but one meaning—viz, that she herself was to be the eventual recipient of the gift. She thereupon visited the jeweler's shop and inspected his stock, but at the price she was empowered to give saw nothing that particularly took her fancy. A fascinating piece of workmanship, however, did attract her, the price of which was 3,000 guineas. The desire to possess it became irresistible. She arranged with the jeweler to send the necklace to the purchaser and invoice it to him at the agreed upon price, while she gave her own check for the balance. Then she went home and awaited the arrival of the gift. Some days passed, but there was no appearance of the necklace. A horrible doubt which assailed her became certainty a day or two later when she saw the identical necklace she had helped to pay for sparkling on the neck of a younger and more beautiful rival.—Grand Magazine.

Making More Than a Living

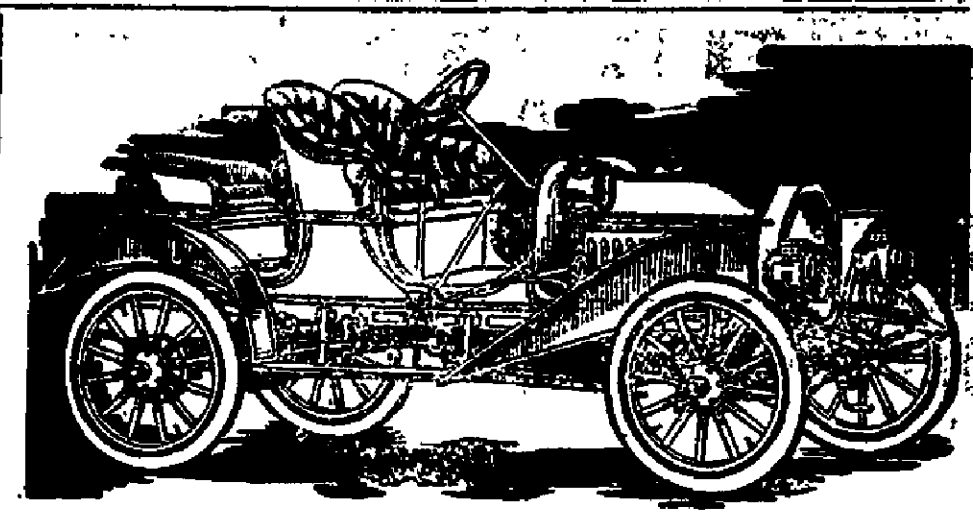

Nearly every man who works steadily makes more than a living. During these slow times the men who have saved something appreciate what it is to have something laid away for a rainy day. A few cents a day soon counts up, and when savings are placed in a bank at a tidy interest the sum soon grows to proportions that make it a safeguard against want when work is not plentiful. Figure up how much more than a living you are making now, and place the difference in this bank. Four per cent. interest paid in savings department.

A Slight Difference.

The globe trotter was telling about the wonders of India.

"The scenery in some portions of the country," he said, with enthusiasm, "is incomparable. Far, far away, the mountains pile up toward the sky, and stretching off to them are beautiful valleys, while close at hand you can get in sight of a man eating tiger."

"I beg your pardon," interrupted an eager listener, "but did you say inside of a man eating tiger or in sight of one?"—New York Press.

All Bound.

A citizen of culture and poetic taste went to a public library and asked for Shelley's "Prometheus Unbound."

He was rather taken aback when the librarian replied, with great hauteur: "We don't keep any unbound books in this library."

Missed It.

The prodigal son wrote the old man as follows: "I got religion the other day. Send me $10." But the old man replied: "Religion is free. You got the wrong kind."

INSIDE A SUBMARINE

You Are Greeted by a Deafening, Ear Splitting Racket.

WORSE THAN A BOILER SHOP.

To Make Yourself Heard at All You Must Shout Into the Ear of a Companion—The Economy of Space and the Simplicity of Arrangements.

Climbing down ten rungs of an iron ladder into the interior of a submarine is like going into a boiler shop where there is one continuous, deafening, ear splitting racket like a dozen trip hammers chattering a tattoo and a grind and rumble and thump of machinery as it especially designed to burst your eardrums.

At first the noise in that narrowly confined space is painful and bewildering. To make yourself at all heard you must shout into the ear of a companion. So intense is the strain, says a writer in St. Nicholas, that you marvel how day in and day out human ears can withstand the ordeal.

You find yourself inside what seems an enormous steel cigar painted a neat pearl gray, a color which is serviceable and does not dazzle the eye. Light comes to you partly through portholes and in part from incandescent lamps placed fore and aft in the darker parts of the hull.

You have expected, of course, to find in a tangle of whirling machinery that fills the inside of the boat from stem to stern, threatening with every revolution to take an arm or a leg off. Instead the first thing you see is an uninterrupted "working space," or deck, measuring 7 by 25 or 30 feet.

At the stern, far in the background, are the machines and engines. In fact, this section of the vessel is nothing but machinery, a rumbling mass of silvery steel and glittering brass revolving at the rate of 500 times a minute, so compact that you wonder how the various parts can turn without conflicting or how it is possible for human hands to squeeze through the maze to oil the machinery.

But this economy of space is as nothing to what you will see. The floor you stand on is a cover for the cells of the storage batteries wherein is pent up the electricity with which your boat will propel herself when she runs submerged. The walls amidships and the space in the bow are gigantic ballast tanks to be filled with water that will these are tool boxes and lugged bunks for the crew to sleep in.

The four torpedoes, measuring sixteen feet three inches long, eighteen inches in diameter and weighing 1,500 pounds each, are lashed end for end in pairs at either side, and directly over these are tool boxes and lugged bunks for the crew to sleep in.

The very air which is taken along to keep life in you in case the boat should be detained beneath the surface longer than usual is compressed in a steel cylinder 2,000 pounds per square inch, a pressure so intense that were the cylinder to spring a leak no larger than a pin hole and were the tiny stream of escaping air to strike a human being it would penetrate him through and through and drill a hole through an inch thick board behind him.

And yet everything about the interior arrangements of this boat is so simple that you can see at a glance its purpose. Away forward, where the tip of the cigar comes to a point, are the two torpedo tubes out of which the gunner will send his deadly projectiles scorching beneath the waters at the rate of 35 knots an hour against an unsuspecting hull.

Directly under the conning tower is a platform, three feet square and elevated three feet from the deck, upon which the captain stands, head and shoulders extending into the tower, so that while at his post he is visible to the crew only from the waist line down, and at the feet of the captain and on a level with his platform is stationed another of the officers, in charge of the wheel that controls the diving rudders and the gauges that register the angle of ascent and decline and show how deep the boat is down.

The two officers are in personal communication, so that in case of heart disease or other mishap either can jump to the other man's place.

Time to Wake.

Judge Wheaton A. Gray was once harangue by the prosecuting counsel on a warm day at the end of a long harangue by the prosecuting counsel he noticed one of the jurymen asleep. As soon as the argument was completed the judge addressed the jury in this peculiar manner: "Gentlemen of the jury, the prosecuting attorney has completed his argument. Wake up and listen to the instructions of the court."—San Francisco Argonaut.

One Was Enough.

"Dad," said the white faced lad, "how many cigars does it take to hurt a boy?"

"How many have you smoked?"

"One."

"That's the number," said dad, and, taking down the strap from behind the door, he soon convinced the boy that he was right.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Common.

"They are quite ordinary people, aren't they?"

"Yes—keep their engagements, eat plain food, pay their bills and all that sort of thing."—Life.

The world has not yet learned the riches of frugality.—Cicero.

THATCHING.

The Ancient Art in the Low Countries and in England.

Once upon a time two amateur botanists were hunting bog mosses on Exmoor, on the confines of the land of Lorna Doone. About the hour of luncheon they found that their enthusiasm had led them far afield, a good hour and a half from the farmhouse which they had made their temporary headquarters. The only place which yielded promise of food was a shepherd's shack half a mile distant, so thither they went. That the shack, or, rather, its owner, a small, wiry, dark man with curly hair, could offer nothing better than brown bread, which was woefully "clit," or heavy, and raw onions is neither here nor there. The point was that the roof of the shack was artistically thatched with layers of plaited reeds.

"Feyther taught I th' way to do un," explained the shepherd, with an upward jerk of his thumb toward the roof. "An' his feyther taught 'im afore that, an' his feyther afore that, an' back an' back twill nobody can think."

"A hereditary art evidently," said one of the most hunters to his companion. "But I never saw thatches like these outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent." Then he said to the man of Devon, "And what is your name, may I ask?"

"Well," replied the shepherd, "most folk call I Van, but ma right name be Henry Van Torp. They do say that ma gurt-grandfeather were a-ut'n agalust England an' were took prisoner an' married a Devon girl an' settled 'ereabout"—he indicated the southward sweep of the moor—"but these be a lot of voolish tales to ma think in!"—Craftsman.

"Do you think the world is growing worse?"
"Dunno as 'tis," responded the old man. "They're tellin' the very fish stories I heard when I was a boy."—Philadelphia Ledger.

WEIGHT OF A HORSE.

Bad Guesses Made by Men Unskilled in Horsemanship.

Many people, even among those who frequently make use of horses, have little idea what an ordinary horse weighs and would have much difficulty to guess whether a given animal standing before their eyes weighed 500 or 1,500 pounds. Yet they would have no such difficulty with a man and probably be able to guess, especially if they were good Yankees, within ten or twenty pounds of his weight. The governments of Europe have long been purchasing and weighing horses for the military service and transferring them from carriage or draft employment to the various branches of cavalry and artillery. The animals are ordinarily assessed according to weight. The French military authorities find that an ordinary light carriage or riding horse, such as in the United States would be called a "good little buggy horse," weighs from 300 to 400 kilograms—say from 600 to 900 pounds. Such horses as these are assigned to the light cavalry corps. The next grade above, which in civil life passes as a "coupe horse," or carriage horse of medium weight, ranges in weight up to 450 kilograms, about 1,000 pounds. This horse goes to help mount the cavalry of the line.

Next come the fashionable "coach horses" of persons of luxury, which weigh from 500 to 550 kilograms, or from 1,000 to nearly 1,300 pounds. These horses go to serve the purpose of drill for the cavalry belonging to the reserve military forces. Above these there are still two grades of heavy horses. The first are those used for ordinary draft purposes and are commonly found drawing the omnibuses of Paris where such vehicles are still in use. These weigh from 1,100 to 1,500 pounds. The heaviest horses are the Clydesdales and Percherons, which are oxen in size and strength and which weigh from 600 to 800 and sometimes even up to 900 kilograms—that is, from 1,300 up to nearly 2,000 pounds. None of these Percherons of the heaviest weight are used in the military service, but some of the lighter ones are employed for draft and artillery purposes—Buffalo Commercial.

A Town of Macs.
Scotsmen are remarkably successful as colonists. They are also very clanish. There are many prosperous settlements in Greater Britain where Caledonians largely predominate, but the names of these localities do not carry that fact on their face. Nobody, however, can be mistaken as to the prevailing nationality in "Macessville." This is a town in the Cobalt district of Nova Scotia. You will be perfectly safe in assuming anybody there thus: "I say, Mac."—London Chronicle

In the Depths of the Sea.
The quantity of light emitted by many minute deep sea animals is so great as to supply over definite areas of the sea bottom a sufficient illumination to render visible the colors of the animals themselves. Some cephalopods are furnished with apparatus which reflects the light from their phosphorescent bodies upon the sea bottom over which they float. This reflecting apparatus is spoken of as "an efficient bullseye lantern for use in hunting through the abyssal darkness."

The Contrary.
"I dropped some money in the market today," announced Mr. Wyss at the dinner table.
"Again?" exclaimed Mrs. Wyss reproachfully.
"No," replied Mr. Wyss mournfully, "a loss."—Judge's Library.

Explanations in Order.
A man whose wife was extremely jealous planned a pleasant surprise for her in the form of a trip to New York to see "The Merry Widow" and wrote a friend in the city to let him know the earliest date for which he could secure seats. The next day when he was away from home the following telegram was delivered there, addressed to him, but opened by his wife: "Nothing doing with the widow until the 10th. Will that suit you?" Explanations were demanded.

COURT REFUSED TRANSFER OF LICENSE; CHARGES AGAINST HALEY NOT SUSTAINED

Judge McIlvaine Hands Down His Decision In Case.

HE DOES NOT FAVOR

The Idea of Peddling A Privilege Granted By The Court.

In opinions handed down by the court yesterday afternoon, written by Judge McIlvaine, the court refuses to transfer the license of Edward Haley, at the Central hotel, Roscoe, to William Coulson, and also decides in favor of Mr. Haley in the action to revoke his license. In the refusal to make the transfer the one principal reason for the refusal is that the party who desire the license is not a bona-fide owner of the hotel property, and had only agreed to take it under the condition that the license be transferred to him. The court expresses itself directly on the question of trafficking in licenses.

In the decision in the action to have Mr. Haley's license revoked the court finds that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant the revocation under the law. The opinions in part in both cases are given in full below:

Transfer Refused.

Application to transfer license of the said Edward Haley to William Coulson for the balance of the license year expiring May 1, 1909.

Opinion.

McIlvaine, P. J.:

Edward Haley has a license to sell liquor at the Central hotel in Roscoe, Pa. By his petition on August 20, 1908, he asks that the license be transferred to William Coulson, and the proposed transferee in this court.

On an original application for license and has filed the required bond with the Charleroi Savings Bank as his surety.

Act of May 17, 1901, among other things provides that any transferee of license, whether for wholesale or retail of such liquors under the provisions of this Act may be made during the regular term of court or in chambers during vacation, when the applicant or applicants for said transfer shall have presented to the court a petition setting forth all the facts necessary under existing laws for original application for liquor license.

We have a court rule in regard to original applications which provides that no application for license to sell vinous, spirituous malt or brewed liquors at retail will be heard where the applicant is not at the time of the hearing the bona fide owner or lessee of a hotel building in actual existence, etc.

At the hearing on this application it appeared that William Coulson has a contract with Edward Haley, which is conditional and is not to be enforced unless this court makes a decree transferring Haley's license to him. This in our opinion makes William Coulson an applicant for a license, which, if made at the regular license court, would have to be refused, for the reason that he is not the absolute and unconditional owner of a hotel building such as is required by the rule to which we have referred.

In other words, the contract introduced in evidence at the hearing shows that Mr. Coulson is buying a license rather than a hotel, and if he cannot get the license he does not want the hotel, and he virtually asks the court to become a party to the contract by agreeing that Haley may sell his license to him. This court is already on record in such cases.

And now, September 8, 1908, the application of Edward Haley to have his license transferred to William Coulson, after due hearing refused.

Rule on Edward Haley to show cause why his license granted at the license court for the year 1908 and covering the year commencing May 1, 1909, should not be revoked.

Opinion.

McIlvaine, P. J.:

There are two provisions in the Act known as the Brooks Law regulating the granting of license to sell liquor by retail which provides for the revocation of a license granted under this Act. The first is found in the 7th section, which reads in this way:

"Upon sufficient cause being shown or proof being made to the said court that the party holding a license has violated any law of this Commonwealth relating to the sale of liquors, the court of quarter sessions shall, upon notice being given to the person so licensed and after hearing revoke the same." The other is found in the 15th section which provides that any person convicted of more than one offense under the penal provisions of the Brooks Law shall not again be licensed in any city or county of the Commonwealth, and the license of any person permitting the customary visitation of disreputable persons for keeping a disorderly place, may, upon proof, be at any time revoked by the court, and when thus revoked the same party shall not be licensed in any city or county of the Commonwealth.

The petition asking for this rule, briefly summarized, contains two charges which are covered by these two provisions. One is that the licensed, Edward Haley, sold liquor to men of known intemperate habits, and the other is that he kept a disorderly house. When the license court of 1908 was held, three applicants from Roscoe borough asked for a renewal of their hotel licenses.

Against the granting of each one of these licenses remonstrance were filed by the Rev. R. D. Walker and others. After an extended hearing the court decided that one of these licenses should be reached, believing that the proof showed beyond a reasonable doubt that the applicant had violated the law. The other two licenses were granted, one of which was granted to Edward Haley. Considerable testimony was introduced at that court showing that Mr. Haley had violated the law by selling to persons who were men of known intemperate habits, and also that he kept a disorderly place. We concluded, however, after due consideration that there might be some doubt about his being guilty of the charges made against him and we gave him the benefit of the doubt.

And now, September 8, 1908, the rule to show cause why the license of Edward Haley should not be revoked is discharged, each party to pay its own costs.

BY THE COURT.

Body of Unknown Man Picked Up Last Night.

The body of an unknown man was picked up near the railroad station last night about 9:15. He had been struck by a train and his head cut off. His body was taken to the undertaking rooms of F. W. Jones where it still remains unidentified.

The man was about 45 years of age and about 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighed about 160 pounds. He had dark hair and a black mustache. He was also minus his left arm, it being taken off about seven inches from the shoulder. Several persons who viewed the remains at the undertaking rooms this morning state that the man has been seen around town for several days.

ARRESTED AT CINCINNATI

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 8.—Six feet tall, handsome, well dressed and highly educated. Wilhelm de Ruy was arrested here this afternoon by Detective Callahan and Jackson and locked up in Central station on the charge of embezzling $75,000 from three banks in Uniontown, Pa. Warrants for the man's arrest had been mailed to Cincinnati by the Uniontown authorities.

It is alleged that the man was bank clerk and that he had failed to deposit in bank large sums that Hungarian miners in Pennsylvania gave him for deposit. The police said the man had been locked up at Jersey City, but escaped through an oversight. He had clippings from newspapers in his pocket that he showed the police and that, he said, proved he was not the man being sought by the Uniontown authorities.

FAYETTE CITY TOOK THE FIRST

A Home Run With Two On Base Did The Damage.

Fayette City took the first of the series yesterday afternoon by a 5 to 2 score. Hughey Lavery was in fine form and allowed Charleroi but five hits. McHale worked for Charleroi and while not bit hard a home-run was made by Kennedy and Young over the left field fence. Charleroi tried hard to score many times during the game but a sensational hit of fielding would cut their chances off. The only time they were able to cross the pan was in the first and last innings when hits were bunched on Lavery. Score:

OFFICERS BULLET MAY PROVE FATAL

Connellsville, Sept. 8.—Following a disturbance at the New Haven Slawish ball, Steve Malunka, a foreigner, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Constable William Shrumm. The bullet struck Malunka in the back, entered through his shoulder blade and penetrated the lung. He is in the Cottage hospital and reports today that he will not recover. Constable Shrumm was given a hearing Tuesday before Justice Smurr of New Haven and held for court, charged with felonious shooting. He gave $2,000 bail, with A. W. Hart and C. M. Miller on his bond.

There are many stories current concerning the shooting and people of New Haven are loath to talk about it. However, enough evidence was secured to warrant charges being made against the officer. The trouble started between the foreigners and Clarence Shrumm, son of the constable. The latter says he fired in self-defense and it is known that the shooting took place after Shrumm had been knocked down with a pop bottle.

There was a dance at the Slavish hall Monday night. According to a story from reliable source Clarence Shrumm went to the hall shortly after midnight and while there trouble ensued between him and several foreigners. It is said he was ejected. Constable Shrumm then appeared on the scene and sought to make an arrest. This made matters worse and a fight ensued during which the officer was knocked down with a flying pop bottle. It was then that the officer drew his gun and fired upon the crowd, striking Malunka in the back.

County Detective Frank McLaughlin came to Connellsville this morning and placed Shrumm under arrest, holding him for the hearing before Justice Smurr.

The officer claims that he was justified in firing the shot but the foreigners at the hall contend that the action was without sufficient provocation.

MARRIED LUNATIC FOR HIS MONEY

Petition Made To Annul The Ceremony Is Before Orphans Court.

Uniontown, Sept. 8.—Charged with having married a lunatic in order to secure his property, amounting to $14,000, a petition was presented to Judge James C. Work in the Orphans' Court yesterday afternoon, asking that the marriage be annulled and the marriage set aside.

The petition was presented by Daniel L. Dillinger of Greensburg and relatives of the alleged demented man. It recites that the couple were married secretly after having been refused a marriage license in Greensburg. Pfoutz is 52 years old and Mrs. Hough, who was a widow with six children, is 35 years old. The former was never married and was alleged to be of unsound mind for 20 years. Dillinger having been appointed a committee in January 20 years ago at the request of his father, and during that time he has purchased his clothes, paid his board bill and looked after him in every way.

The property is in stocks and bonds and has been invested from year to year for Hough's benefit. The petition further recites that on August 6, 1905, the couple resided to Greensburg where they endeavored to get a license to marry. It was refused them there, the officials knowing Hough and also having received notice from the commissioner. Leaving Greensburg, the couple then went to Uniontown, where they procured a license. The clerk issuing the license did not notice anything peculiar about the couple except that the groom was rather backward.

After securing the license the couple went to the parsonage of J. J. Sala Leland where the knot was tied good and hard and then they went back to Hough's home near Greensburg. The first intimation that the relatives and Commissioner Dillinger had of the wedding was a petition which was circulated by the wife to have her husband's guardian dismissed. She took it around through the community and even went to several agents of Hough's. At these places she offered $500 each for a signature, it is alleged in the petition. A brother, William Pfoutz, hearing of the proceedings then called the Commissioner's attention to it and the proceedings to annul the marriage were instituted through Robbins and Kunkle of Greensburg. The petition concluded with the statement that "she wanted the money and if she didn't get it she didn't want him."

Judge Work granted a rule upon the widow to show cause why the wedding should not be declared null and void and be set aside as prayed for in the petition.

The papers in the case will be served on the widow today.

WOLF HAS CAUSED CONSTERNATION

Greensburg, Pa., Sept. 8.—A wolf has caused consternation among farmers in this section, having killed pigs and chickens and committed other depredations. The wolf escaped from the menageries of a carnival company which exhibited here last week. Yesterday afternoon it was seen near Raudebaugh, where it killed a pig.

Word was telephoned to the barracks of Troop A, State Police, and two sergeants were sent out on the trail. Shortly before dark they discovered the animal, but before they could shoot the wolf escaped into a cornfield. An old-time hunt on horseback is proposed by the farmers.

MAY LOOSE STATE AID

Monessen Public Schools May Loose State Appropriation.

Unless something desperate is done the unusual happens Monessen will fall into the list of towns of Pennsylvania losing the State appropriation for the public schools, which would amount this year to over $5,000.

on the part of the school board. Besides this amount there was due from the State to the Monessen Public schools $600 on account of being placed in the first class schools last year, which may also be lost.

On June 17 Superintendent R. W. Himelick prepared the statistical report that should have been filed with the state superintendent of schools before July 15 and had it ready for the signature of the president and secretary of the local school board, but this was not done, although it is said the board ordered it. In the meantime the bond of the treasurer of the school board was being held up, on account of an alleged irresponsibility of the bondsmen and the report was not filed.

The statistical report which authorizes the payment of the State appropriation was not filed until September 2 and unless State Superintendent Nathan Schaeffer makes some exception to the law, Monessen will lose this year in the neighborhood of $6,000 in school funds. To maintain the present system of schools it is feared a special tax will be required this year, on account of carelessness of the board.

Coincident with this trouble Superintendent Himelick last week handed his resignation to the board to become effective the 15th inst. He expects to spend this year in study and travel and perhaps take up his chosen profession again next year at some other place.

CANNOT PRINT PRIZE LISTS

Under the present postal laws it is no longer permissible for a newspaper to print lists of prize winners or any euerbe party, fair or game of chance, or even to announce such affairs in advance.

Following is a portion of Section 499 of the postal laws and regulations unamiable matter:

"Nor shall any newspaper, magazine, pamphlet or publication of any kind containing an advertisement of any lottery, or gift enterprises of any kind, offering prizes dependent upon chance, or containing any list of prizes awarded at the drawing of any such lottery or gift enterprise, whether said list is of any part or of all of the drawings, be carried in the mail or delivered by any postmaster or letter carrier."

Disbarment from the mails is not the only punishment prescribed under the above section, as any persons who deposits in a mail box, or offers for delivery, any such matter as described above is guilty of a misdemeanor, which is punishable by a fine of $500 or one years' imprisonment, or both.

The postponement of the trial of J.
R. F. Rinehart, Cashier of the defunct Farmers and Drivers Bank of Waynesburg, was largely due to the active efforts of a notoriously yellow Pittsburg newspaper which for the past couple of weeks has sought to convict Rinehart in its own columns of all manner of crime in connection with the failed bank on evidence wholly unsupported and authorities
always anonymous.

While some of the matter published
may be found on facts, it is evident from a mere perusal of it that it is more or less embellished. It has been well calculated to inflame the public mind in Greene county and to bring forth the threats of personal violence which are alleged to have been made.
Under the circumstances, it was perhaps proper to postpone the trial.

On the other hand, if the prejudice against Rinehart is as great in Greene county as his attorneys indicate, justice demanded, not a postponement,
but a change of venue; and further demands on the part of the defense will lend color to the charge that the object is not justice but escape from justice.

Among the Exchanges

Some hundreds of millions of British capital have been invested in Indian railways, but the Hindus themselves have not been buyers of railway stocks and bonds. The money for the development of the natural resources has come from abroad, with the result that the annual interest payments have to be made abroad.
It would be much better for these interest payments to be made at home, and it is now proposed to draw for future loans upon the vast stores of gold and silver known to be hoarded by the natives. An official commission, charged with the task of considering the whole question of Indian railway finance, has recently reported that the annual capital expenditure of the government in the construction of railways should be increased from $50, 000,000 to $62,000,000. "No definite limit," says the report, "can be assigned to the amount that can be remuneratively devoted to the development and expansion of the Indian rail-accordingly urges an effort be made to enlist native capital in the government's remunerative enterprises.—

Baltimore Sun.

It is now made known that there was not even the poor excuse of the venue of a grossly guilty individual from summary justice to furnish a semblance of warrant for the Springfield riot. What started the row was an allegation that a white woman had been attacked by a negro. A suspect was arrested and was spirited out of town. Whereupon the mob, denied its expected victim, took full possession of the city. The place of business of a citizen who had assisted the officers to save their prisoner was asked and a wholesale assault was made on the negro population. Two negroes were lynched. Of course, if the subject had been taken from the officers he would have been lynched.
It now appears that this man was innocent. The victim of the assault has so testified. Verily, Springfield's ignominy is made complete to the last detail.—Providence Journal.

The German emperor's devotion to peace must always be understood as conditioned upon his having his way.
He will not quarrel with anybody who respects German supremacy. To anybody on the other hand who undertakes to act without consulting him
he is always ready with a warning.
He came very near to precipitating a European war by his former interference in Morocco, and it is not strange that his present abrupt attitude should cause general apprehension. In this case, however, he will have the weight of all the other signatories of the Algeiras act against him, and it is not likely that he will find a causus belli in the terms of recognition of Moulay Hafid. He only wishes it understood that he is not to be disregarded in any new arrangements.—
Philadelphia Ledger.

The daily reports of outrages and threats from the Black Hand evil show how common this highly mischievous crime is becoming with us and call for the most energetic steps on the part of the proper authorities to check it.
The crime is more often chronicled,
it would seem, than burglary, and if it is not soon stopped it requires no far stretch of the imagination to see people generally laid under tribute to this form of brigadage. It is a highly obnoxious robbery. Any person suspected of having means is liable nowadays to receive a letter demanding money on pain that, if refused, death or some other fearful punishment will be inflicted. It is easy to see how a community can be terrorized. Regarding this evil the Washington Star says:

"The Italian highwaymen have transferred their activities from the less orderly sections of their own land to the most densely populated portions of America. The Black Hand crimes must be checked before they extend beyond the limits of the Italian colonies in our cities. It is a disgraceful reflection upon the American municipal government that organized crime has thrived so long almost without hindrance."—Boston Advertiser.

Figures submit a Wednesday's hearing of the public service commission by the auditor of the Metropolitan receivers showed that the cost per car mile of operating the trolley and horse car lines had been 23.41 and 31.13 cents respectively since the re-ceivership, as against 19.01 and 29.36
in the fiscal year prior to the re-ceivership. This comparison is in line with the usual results under a court administration of a property, but it would not be fair in the present case
to lay all the responsibility at the receivers' door. Cost of operation presumably includes the charge for maintenance and repairs, and, as everyone knows, the condition of the company's plant and equipment was so bad
when the receivers took charge that unusually large expenditure of such purposes was peremptory. Even granting this, however, the fact remains that the cost of running the company is increased without any comprehensive plan for meeting it,

and that the results, so far as regards the efficiency of service, are notoriously unsatisfactory. The problem is one which can be properly taken up only through reorganization of the old capital and raising a new capital, and this is an undertaking beyond the scope of the receivers, powers. There can be no genuine rehabilitation of the system, and no return to proper transit facilities on the surface lines, until the owners and creditors of the property take the matters into their own hands.—New York Post.

Bryan's Pet Theory.

During his extended career as a statesman of presidential aspirations
Mr. Bryan has shown a remarkable facility for taking up with theories in statecraft, the crudeness and impracticability of which have been easily demonstrable. And concerning his free coinage of silver and his government ownership of railroads hobbies the demonstrations seem to have been plain enough to convince even himself of their erroneous assumptions, as there is not a word in the latest Bryan platform advocating either of these aforesaid Bryan doctrines. But in the Oklahoma scheme to have the state create and maintain a special fund for the guarantee of deposits in banks Mr. Bryan felt so sure that he had at last come across something of high political value and a scheme, moreover, that would stand the severest scrutiny that he adopted
it and had it incorporated in the Denver platform. In less than two months following the formal adoption by the democratic presidential candidate of this new scheme of finance it has been reduced to an absurdity by more than one method of analysis.
Oklahoma, where the plan is now operative and applicable to all state banks, the following facts indicative of its defectiveness have become apparent: The Oklahoma law provides that the fund created for the protection of bank depositors shall be invested in state securities known as state warrants which bear three per cent.
interest annually. Now it has developed with a clearness which is apparent to the most casual observer that the state, in time of panic, when it would be absolutely necessary to have the guarantee fund ready and available, will find itself loaded up with a form of security which would find so sale whatever on the market
during panicky times except at a ruinous discount. Banks fail generally because they are unable to realize upon their assets, and Oklahoma, loaded
up with its own promises to pay,
would not in a panic season be able to turn those promises into cash. As an national system, instead of a states system the basic guarantee scheme is equally defective, though for other reasons. The palpable fact that it would tax the conservatively managed savings banks and conservative institutions generally to make good the losses sustained by depositors in banks
associated with speculative interests is alone sufficient to condemn the latest of Mr. Bryan's political hobbies.—Baltimore American.

The War of Words That Comes When They Block Each Other.
There is no more entertaining way to spread an idle hour in Paris than to get into a taxicab and instruct the driver to go along some street where you will be reasonably sure to get into a jam or to bump against another cab. The charm of the experience is, of course, enhanced by your ignorance of what the cabbies say.
Should your driver merely graze the wheels of another cab he will turn on his seat and yell mellodiously at the other driver, who in turn will shout back an assortment of vowels. But the best is a quarrel between two cab-bles obstructing each other's way.
The conversation, translated as nearly literally as is safe, goes in this wise:
"Sacred name! Why do you?"
"Ehly blue! I do not!"
"Stomach on the ground! You have the face of an ox!"
"Blue stomach! Are you in chains?"
"A bas! Name of a dog!"
"Mon Dieu! Name of a pig!"
"Wow (or words to that effect)!
Name of a name!"
"A thousand deaths! Name of a
name of a name!"
Now you begin to expect some doings. While you have not fully understood, you are satisfied that nothing but pistols and knives will wipe out the insults.
Unfortunately about this time the jam is untangled and you are allowed to drive away, but the other driver
yells after you:
"Aha! You are a little piece of brown soap!"
It seems that this expression is the "fighting name" in Paris. Were it not that your cabby owes a duty to you and must convey you to your destination you know by the facial expression that he would climb down and get that other cabby and maul up the city with him.
He contents himself with turning
about and making a face in the direction of his enemy and of going through the motion of spitting at him.
Then he says "Yopp!" to the horse,
and the war is over.—Chicago Post.

Making More Than a Living

Nearly every man who works steadily makes more than a living. During these slow times the men who have saved something appreciate what it is to have something laid away for a rainy day. A few cents a day soon counts up, and when savings are placed in a bank at a tidy interest the sum soon grows to proportions that make it a safeguard against want when work is not plentiful. Figure up how much more than a living
you are making now, and place
the difference in this bank.

A Slight Difference.

The globe trotter was telling about the wonders of India.

"The scenery in some portions of the country," he said, "with enthusiasm, 'is incomparable. Far, far away, the mountains pile up toward the sky, and stretching off to them are beautiful valleys, while close at hand you can get in sight of a man eating tiger'—

You Are Greeted by a Deafening Ear Splitting Racket.

WORSE THAN A BOILER SHOP.

To Make Yourself Heard at All You Must Shout Into the Ear of a Companion—The Economy of Space and the Simplicity of Arrangements.

Climbing down ten rungs of an iron ladder into the interior of a submarine is like going into a boiler shop where there is one continuous, deafening, ear splitting racket like a dozen trip hammers chattering a tattoo amid a grind and rumble and thump of machinery as if especially designed to burst your eardrums.

At first the noise in that narrowly confined space is painful and bewildering. To make yourself at all heard you must shout into the ear of a companion. So intense is the strain, says a writer in St. Nicholas, that you marvel how day in and day out human ears can withstand the ordeal.

You find yourself inside what seems an enormous steel cigar painted a neat pearl gray, a color which is serviceable and does not dazzle the eye. Light comes to you partly through portholes and in part from incandescent lamps placed fore and aft in the darker parts of the hull.

You have expected, of course, to find in a temple of whirling machinery that fills the inside of the boat from stern to stern, threatening with every revolution to take an arm or a leg off. Instead the first thing you see is an unbroken "working space," or deck, measuring 7 by 25 or 30 feet.

At the stern, far in the background, are the machines and engines. In fact, this section of the vessel is nothing but machinery, a rumbling mass of silvery steel and glittering brass revolving at the rate of 500 times a minute, so compact that you wonder how the various parts can turn without conflicting or how it is possible for human hands to squeeze through the maze to oil the machinery.

But this economy of space is as nothing to what you will see. The floor you stand on is a cover for the cells of the storage batteries wherein is pent up the electricity with which your boat will propel herself when she runs submerged. The walls amidships and the space in the bow are gigantic oil-tanks to be filled with water that will these are tool boxes and lugged bunks for the crew to sleep in.

The four torpedoes, measuring sixteen feet three inches long, eighteen inches in diameter and weighing 1,500 pounds each, are lashed end for end in pairs at either side, and directly over these are tool boxes and lugged bunks for the crew to sleep in.

The very air which is taken along to keep life in you in case the boat should be detained beneath the surface longer than usual is compressed in a steel cylinder 2,000 pounds per square inch, a pressure so intense that were the cylinder to spring a leak no larger than a pin hole and were the tiny stream of escaping air to strike a human being it would penetrate him through and through and drill a hole through an inch thick board behind him.

And yet everything about the interior arrangements of this boat is so simple that you can see at a glance its purpose. Away forward, where the tip of the cigar comes to a point, are the two torpedo tubes out of which the gunner will send his deadly projectiles seething beneath the waters at the rate of 35 knots an hour against an unsuspecting hull.

Directly under the conning tower is a platform, three feet square and elevated three feet from the deck, upon which the captain stands, head and shoulders extending into the tower, so that while at his post he is visible to the crew only from the waist line down, and at the feet of the captain and on a level with his platform is stationed another of the officers, in charge of the wheel that controls the diving rudders and the gauges that register the angle of ascent and decline and show how deep the boat is down.

The two officers are in personal communication, so that in case of heart disease or other mishap either can jump to the other man's place.

Time to Wake.

Judge Wheaton A. Gray was once harangue by the prosecuting counsel on a warm day at the end of a long harangue by the prosecuting counsel he noticed one of the jurors asleep. As soon as the argument was completed the judge addressed the jury in this peculiar manner: "Gentlemen of the jury, the prosecuting attorney has completed his argument. Wake up and listen to the instructions of the court."—San Francisco Argonaut.

One Was Enough.

"Dad," said the white faced lad, "how many cigars does it take to hurt a boy?"

"How many have you smoked?"

"One."

"That's the number," said dad, and, taking down the strap from behind the door, he soon convinced the boy that he was right.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THATCHING.

The Ancient Art in the Low Countries and in England.

Once upon a time two amateur botanists were hunting bog mosses on Exmoor, on the confines of the land of Lorna Doone. About the hour of luncheon they found that their enthusiasm had led them far afield, a good hour and a half from the farmhouse which they had made their temporary headquarters. The only place which yielded promise of food was a shepherd's shack half a mile distant, so thither they went. That the shack, or, rather, its owner, a small, wiry, dark man with curly hair, could offer nothing better than brown bread, which was woefully "clit" or heavy, and raw onions is neither here nor there. The point was that the roof of the shack was artistically thatched with layers of plaited reeds.

"Fether taught I th' way to do an," explained the shepherd, with an upward jerk of his thumb toward the roof. "An' his fether taught 'im afore that, an' his fether afore that, an' back an' back twill nobody can think."

"A hereditary art evidently," said one of the moss hunters to his companion. "But I never saw thatches like these outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent." Then he said to the man of Devon. "And what is your name, may I ask?"

"Well," replied the shepherd, "most folk call I Van, but ma right name be Henry Van Torp. They do say that ma gurt-grandfeyther were a vithin against England an' were took prisoner an' married a Devon girl an' settled 'ereabout"—he indicated the southward sweep of the moor—"but these be a lot of foolish tales to ma think in!"—Craftsman.

"Do you think the world is growing worse?"

"Dunno as 'tis," responded the old man. "They're tellin' the very fish stories I heard when I was a boy."—Philadelphia Ledger.

WEIGHT OF A HORSE.

Bad Guesses Made by Men Unskilled in Horsemanship.

Many people, even among those who frequently make use of horses, have little idea what an ordinary horse weighs and would have much difficulty to guess whether a given animal standing before their eyes weighed 500 or 1,500 pounds. Yet they would have no such difficulty with a man and probably be able to guess, especially if they were good Yankees, within ten or twenty pounds of his weight. The governments of Europe have long been purchasing and weighing horses for the military service and transferring them from carriage or draft employment to the various branches of cavalry and artillery. The animals are ordinarily assigned according to weight. The French military authorities find that an ordinary light carriage or riding horse, such as in the United States would be called a "good little, buggy horse," weighs from 800 to 1,000 kilograms—say from 800 to 900 pounds. Such horses as these are assigned to the light cavalry corps. The next grade above, which in civil life passes as a "coupe horse," or carriage horse of medium weight, ranges in weight up to 1,200 kilograms, about 1,300 pounds. This horse goes to help mount the cavalry of the line.

Next come the fashionable "coach horses" of persons of luxury, which weigh from 500 to 550 kilograms, or from 1,000 to nearly 1,300 pounds. These horses go to serve the purpose of drill for the cavalry belonging to the reserve military forces. Above these there are still two grades of heavy horses. The first are those used for ordinary draft purposes and are commonly found drawing the omnibuses of Paris where such vehicles are still in use. These weigh from 1,100 to 1,500 pounds. The heaviest horses are the Clydesdales and Percherons, which are oxen in size and strength and which weigh from 600 to 800 and sometimes even up to 900 kilograms—that is, from 1,300 up to nearly 2,000 pounds. None of these Percherons of the heaviest weight are used in the military service, but some of the lighter ones are employed for draft and artillery purposes.—Buffalo Commercial.

A Town of Macs.

Scotsmen are remarkably successful as colonists. They are also very clanish. There are many prosperous settlements in Greater Britain where Caledonians largely predominate, but the names of these localities do not carry that fact on their face. Nobody, however, can be mistaken as to the prevailing nationality in "Macsville." This is a town in the Cobalt district of Nova Scotia. You will be perfectly safe in assuming anybody there thus: "I say, Mac."—London Chronicle.

In the Depths of the Sea.

The quantity of light emitted by many minute deep sea animals is so great as to supply over definite areas of the sea bottom a sufficient illumination to render visible the colors of the animals themselves. Some cephalopods are furnished with apparatus which reflects the light from their phosphorescent bodies upon the sea bottom over which they float. This reflecting apparatus is spoken of as "an efficient" ballise lantern for use in hunting through the abysmal darkness."

The Contrary.

"I dropped some money in the market today," announced Mr. Wyss at the dinner table.

"Again?" exclaimed Mrs. Wyss reproachfully.

"No," replied Mr. Wyss mournfully; "a loss."—Judge's Library.

Explanations in Order.

A man whose wife was extremely jealous planned a pleasant surprise for her in the form of a trip to New York to see "The Merry Widow" and wrote a friend in the city to let him know the earliest date for which he could secure seats. The next day when he was away from home the following telegram was delivered there, addressed to him, but opened by his wife: "Nothing doing with the widow until the 10th. Will that suit you?" Explanations were demanded.
